Course Description

Sensation and perception are at the heart of psychology. The first academic psychology departments focussed on perception and many things that we study in psychology today, ultimately depend on our ability to make sense of the world around us.

This course will illustrate how the study of sensation and perception combines results from psychology with insights from biology and computer science. We will focus on the sensory systems responsible for seeing and hearing, and proceed from an understanding of the respective stimulus (light/sound), to the physiology of the receptors and the cortical areas involved in processing, to the way we use the information that reaches our eyes and ears to "compute" meaningful interpretations of the world.

Program Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, students should be able to:

1. Demonstrate broad knowledge of biological determinants of sensation and perception .
2. Understand and interpret principles of sensation and perception in everyday life.
3. Describe and evaluate current theory and research in sensation and perception.
4. Define causes of human sensation and perception from different perspectives.

Description of Assignments

Students will participate in weekly mini-exams (about 2 minutes) online. Each exam will make up 5% of the final grade. The exams can be taken from a smart phone or a laptop computer with internet access. The url at which the exams can be accessed will be made available in class on September 10. The assessments consist of a list of statements for which students will need to decide if they are correct or incorrect. There will not be enough time to process all statements in detail and students are and achieving approximately 80% correct will be sufficient to get a grade of A+(9). Note that this url will only be active for the week of the assignment. Contact the instructor before September 11 if you will not be able to participate in these mini assessments.

Grading as per Senate Policy

The grading scheme for the course conforms to the 9-point grading system used in undergraduate programs at York (e.g., A+ = 9, A = 8, B+ = 7, C+ = 5, etc.). Assignments and tests[^x] will bear either a letter grade designation or a corresponding number grade (e.g. A+ = 90 to 100, A = 80 to 90, B+ = 75 to 79, etc.)

(For a full description of York grading system see the York University Undergraduate Calendar - Grading Scheme for 2018-19)

Late Work/Missed Tests or Exams

Students with a documented reason for missing a course test, such as illness, compassionate grounds, etc., which is confirmed by supporting documentation (Attending Physician Statement which can be found at: <http://myacademicrecord.students.yorku.ca/pdf/attending-physicians-statement.pdf>) may request accommodation from the Course Instructor. Further extensions or accommodation will require students to submit a formal petition to the Faculty.

If you cannot write an exam you must contact the TA BEFORE the start of the test. If you do not speak to a person directly you must email them - if you don't receive a response, email again. If you are unable to contact someone during a 24 hour period, documentation accounting for the delay must be provided. Documentation verifying the reason for the missed exam (see below) must be provided either prior to or at the time of the make-up. Failure to provide appropriate documentation will result in a grade of 0 on the exam.

There will be only one chance for a make-up test and that will be in the form of an oral exam. Dates for the oral make-up exam need to be made with the instructor within a week after the original final exam date. The actual date for the oral make-up must not be later than January 31, 2019.

Important New Information Regarding Missed Tests

For any missed tests or late assignments, students MUST complete the following online form which will be received and reviewed in the Psychology undergraduate office.

HH PSYC: Missed Tests/Exams Form. Failure to complete the form within 48 hours of the original deadline will result in a grade of zero for the test/assignment.
